Kim, Frierott unite in marriage

Susan Young Kim and Brian Matthew Frierott were united in marriage on Oct. 9, 2010 in a beautiful Japanese Garden, located on the rooftop of the Kyoto Grand Hotel in downtown Los Angeles, Calif.

The bride is the daughter of Kyung and Christina Kim of Dallas, Texas. The groom is the son of Don and Barb Bollheimer of Minster.

Pastor David Page officiated and classical melodies were provided by harpist, Michelle Whitson Stone.

The bride was escorted down the garden path by her father, Kyung Kim. The bride wore a striking, trumpet-style Enzoani wedding gown with a corset top and lace detail. She wore delicate white blossoms with pearl accents in her hair and a statement Kenneth Jay Lane pearl necklace. The bride carried a bouquet of fresh, white orchids with a splash of curly willow and accents of greenery designed by Kerim of My Wedding Blooms.

The matron of honor was Skyla Shin, a friend of the bride since their college days at the University of Texas at Austin. She wore a flowing, silver, satin dress and carried a bouquet of delicate white blossoms.

The best man was Troy Bornhorst, a childhood friend of the groom. He wore a black suit with a silver tie.

The flower girls were Elizabeth Warren and Emily James, both nieces of the bride. They wore matching white dresses with white flower headpieces.

Cole Frierott, nephew of the groom, completed the intimate wedding party as ring bearer.

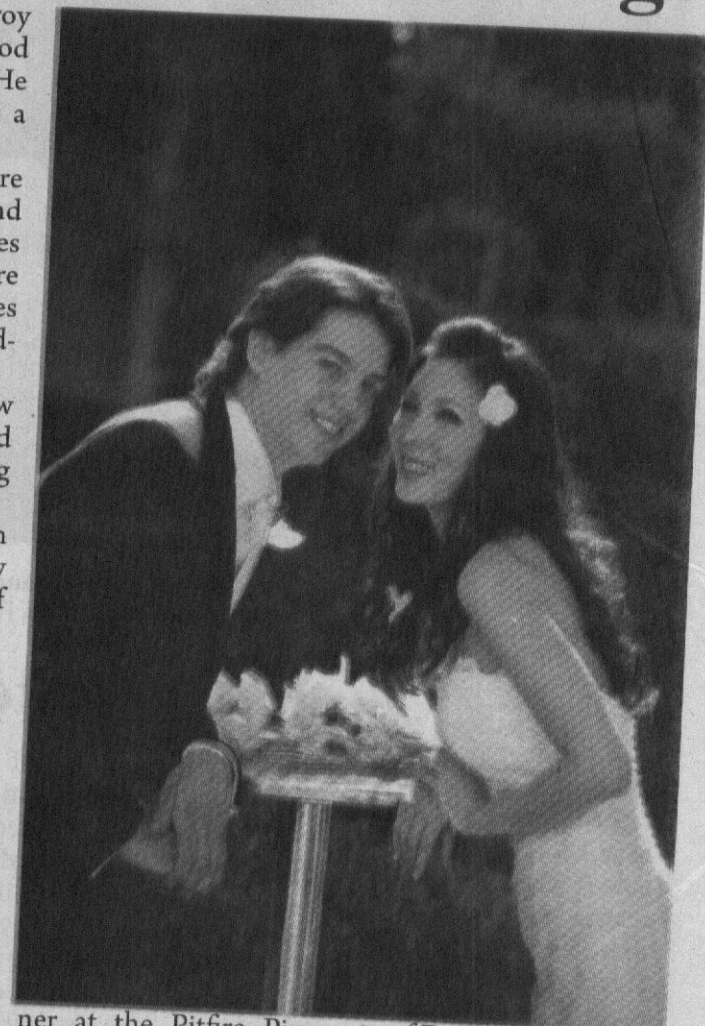

Ushers were William Warren and Andrew James, both nephews of the bride.

The groom wore a black, Dolce & Gabbana suit with a white dress shirt, complete with silver cufflinks.

An outdoor garden cocktail hour featured delectable Cuban delights, like potato balls and chicken empanadas.

The reception was held at Thousand Cranes in the Kyoto Grand Hotel. Guests dined on beef tenderloin and assorted sushi rolls. The bride and groom wore traditional Korean attire, which was custom-made in Seoul. They performed Korean wedding traditions, such as paying respects to both sets of parents.

The groom's parents, Don and Barb Bollheimer, hosted a rehearsal dinner at the Pitfire Pizza in downtown Los Angeles. The bride's parents, Kyung and Christina Kim, hosted an after-wedding celebration at Casa in downtown Los Angeles.
